

I think that the FCC should leave XM Satellite Radio alone, I pay to have the option of listening to my choice of music without all of the commercials and mindless chatter so common to regular radio. Living in a more rural area I like not having to search for the kind of program or music that I prefer, and when traveling I would rather not have to try to find a station that is giving the local weather when I can go right to what I need to hear when I want to hear it.
